Observations / Findings

- Average time to ship the car from the order date is significantly increasing every quarter
- The average ship times are three times higher in the 4th quarter when compared to 1st quarter

Insights:

- The customer feedback is changing significantly from very good to very bad over the quarters
- The revenue and number of orders are also significantly decreasing
- The average shipping days are also significantly increasing every quarter

Recommendations:

- Hire more personnel across the board and especially in customer service
- Optimize the time taken to ship the orders by better planning by maybe increasing the inventory which might help reduce the delay in shipping
- Provide training for personnel to improve customer service
- Decrease the discount provided for each credit card
- Target states with highest customer base (TX,FL,CA,NY,DC) to improve sales
- Focus on targeting sales for American manufactured vehicles to increase the number of orders
